

You might be wondering
"Who was George Henry?"
Good question!

George Henry McFarland was born April 11, 1909, in New York City. A graduate of Culver Military Academy and Cornell University, he was an avid sportsman who was especially interested in hunting and hockey. He made the 1932 U.S. Olympic hockey team, but a skiing accident damaged his leg and ended his dream of competing in the 1932 Lake Placid Winter Olympics. After his injury, George headed to New York City for a career as an investment banker. After several years in the Big Apple, however, he decided that small-town life was more his speed and he moved home to Cambridge, where he would live for more than 40 years. During that time he was a member of the Cambridge Volunteer Fire Department, shot a 300-pound black bear, ran the Cambridge Hotel, and could often be found enjoying a cold Budweiser while hooking fish at Thurber Pond. George Henry McFarland passed away on November 6, 1981, in Cambridge while watching Larry Holmes fight Renaldo Snipes on television for the heavyweight boxing championship. But his legacy lives on at George Henry's, which is owned and operated by his grandson and his wife, Todd and Stacie Trulli. Although George wasn't able to see the restaurant in its current incarnation, we think he'd be proud of the fine food and service we provide to our customers each and every day. And we hope you enjoy it too!

The building in which you're sitting was originally constructed as a potash factory in 1804 by James Warren, for whom Warrensburg is named.

It was converted to the town's first tannery in 1810 by Kitchel Bishop, a prominent early settler who played a significant role in the development of the Adirondacks. Benjamin Burhans purchased the site in 1836 and added a company store. Burhans sold to James Fuller in 1840 when it became the Fuller Boarding House. Patrick Heffron purchased the property in 1887 and continued its use as a boarding house primarily for the employees of the local shirt factory. Heffron remodeled and enlarged in 1889 and established the Grand Army House, named in honor of his service in the Union Army. By 1900 the Grand Army House was well established as one of the Adirondack's finest hotels. For years the hotel was a favorite stopping place for commercial salesman, a destination for tourists due to the rise of the automobile, and a popular gathering spot for local politicians and businessmen. Maurice Panneton purchased the property in 1924 and renamed it the Grand Army Hotel. The hotel continued to earn acclaim as one of the premier lodging destinations in the Adirondacks and in 1929 the name was changed to the Warren Inn. On September 3, 1929, fire tore through the building resulting in a near total loss. Panneton rebuilt Warren Inn bigger and better. The property would change hands multiple times in the 1940s and 1950s until 1963 when it was purchased by Ed and Meta McMane. On April 19, 1973, fire broke out on the third floor of the Warren Inn. The hotel was razed save for the original bathroom and the McManes remodeled and rebuilt the Warren Inn as a small tavern that reopened in November of 1974. The McManes operated the Warren Inn with great success until April of 1980 when it was purchased by John MacDonald. Fire struck again on August 27, 1984, causing severe interior damage. MacDonald sold the property to Tony Trulli on December 31, 1984, when it became Brew & Stew. We became George Henry's in 2001 after Tony passed and the business was taken over by Diana McFarland. In 2006 Tony's oldest son Todd and his wife Stacie left their home in Texas to take over and resuscitate the business.
